Auction natural resource licences

New Delhi: Encouraged by the acceptance of its plea for a court-monitored probe into the 2G spectrum scam relating to irregular allotment of mobile service licences, an NGO has moved the Supreme Court for mandatory auctioning of all lease rights relating to natural resources.

The NGO — Cœurs for Public Interest Litigation — filed an application saying the spectrum scam monitoring provided the opportunity for the judiciary to lay down guidelines on licence allotments relating to exploitation of natural resources and minimize corruption.

"The 2G scam is a fit case to lay down as law a complete prohibition that no right over any natural resources like minerals, energy mines, land or radio waves for communication purposes shall be granted/awarded by the government without a transparent public auction," it said.

The application, drafted by advocate Pranav Sachdeva, stated that had there been a public auction of the licences during A Raja's tenure as telecom minister in 2008, CAG would have had no opportunity to estimate the loss from irregular allotments at Rs 1,76,000 crores. It also reiterated its earlier plea for cancellation of the entire allotment process covering 122 licences during Raja's tenure as minister and their public auction through a transparent system.

The February contract on MCX opened at Rs 7,300 for one DMT (dry metric tonne), touched a high of Rs 7,400 and a low of Rs 7,210 before closing at Rs 7,269. The March contract opened at Rs 7,460 and closed at Rs 7,496.

Both the contracts clocked a volume of 10,500 tonnes and the turnover was Rs 8 crore on MCX.

ICEX iron ore contract for March delivery was up 1.2 per cent at Rs 8,069 a tonne, while April contracts closed at Rs 7,628 a tonne.

Total volume of all the three contracts (March, April and May) was 24,600 tonnes valued at Rs 19.50 crore.

Af invites bids by Indian cos for iron ore mine

Indrani Bagchi | TNN

New Delhi: Afghanistan has invited 15 Indian companies to make initial bids for an iron ore mine in the country, which if successful, could compel India to reconfigure diplomatic equations with Pakistan and Iran.

The bids to develop the Hagiak iron ore mine in Bamian, Wardak and Parwan provinces were invited last week. These companies were out of a total of 22 companies who had showed interest. The Indian government is trying to make it a consolidated bid by the different Indian companies, in which case it could be a negotiated deal with Afghanistan. While the diplomatic effort with Afghanistan is being driven by the external affairs ministry, the endeavour to band together a consortium of the Indian companies is being driven by the mines ministry.

“We promote private and public sector interests equally in foreign countries,” said S Vijay Kumar, secretary mines.

If successful, India will have to seriously rethink its diplomatic equations with both Pakistan and Iran. Quite apart from the security, India will need to answer a fundamental question: how to evacuate the iron ore from Bamian, in the heart of Afghanistan, to the nearest port? The Afghanistan-Pakistan transit trade agreement allows the movement of goods to India from Afghanistan via Pakistan.

Sources said, that could be a possible route, even yielding transit revenues to Pakistan. However, given the parlous state of India-Pakistan relations, what are the bets that Pakistan will find a way of stopping that route? This route, said sources, is vulnerable in terms of security but it’s the shortest. It was the same argument used for the Iran-Pakistan gas pipeline, but security concerns trumped that time.

The other route is through Iran. India has already built a road to the Iran border in Afghanistan. If Iran and India could agree on India developing the Chahbahar port, it could be an easy way of getting the ore to sea. But here, the problem is two-fold. First, Afghan-Iran relations are in terrible shape at present, with Iran blocking the transit of fuel into Afghanistan. India and Iran have a deadlocked relationship, most recently hit by an oil payments problem.

On the iron ore mine, the Afghan government has promised to shortlist companies which will make detailed bids by August, and wants the project underway in 2012. Indian companies like Jindal Steel, JSW Steel, Tata Steel, NMDC, Steel Authority of India and Ispat Industries among others have said they are interested.
